KEVIN SAVIDGE

COMMISSIONER
FEDERAL MEDIATION AND CONCILIATION SERVICE

Kevin M. Savidge is a Commissioner in the Philadelphia Field Office for the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service (FMCS). A native Philadelphian, Commissioner Savidge has used his extensive knowledge and skills in labor-management relations as a mediator since 2005.

Included among Commissioner Savidge's many accomplishments are two FMCS Spot awards in 2007 and 2015 in recognition of exemplary work. Commissioner Savidge also has provided numerous training opportunities, including facilitation of a comprehensive, multi-day program on relationship development skill sets for the casino industry and Unite-Here Local 54 in Atlantic City, NJ.

Commissioner Savidge completed course work in organizing and arbitration case preparation and presentation at the George Meany Center for Labor Studies, now the National Labor College, in Silver Spring, MD.

Prior to joining FMCS, Commissioner Savidge held various positions in the United Paperworkers International Union, PACE International Union and with the United Steel Workers after the merger of the PACE and the USW.
